The correct habit is to confirm every new bank detail by voice, using a phone number you already know and never the one written in the suspicious email. A one-minute callback can save an entire transfer. fraudJobTitle: 'Job scam and fake remote work', fraudJobBody1: 'A job scam promises easy money for simple actions:

liking content, filling in forms, forwarding bank transfers, renting out your account or buying materials that will allegedly be refunded later. The target is often hooked with a small initial payment to make the scheme look real.', fraudJobBody2: 'The safest rule is to reject any offer where the worker must send money first, use a personal account for third parties or hand over documents before a verifiable interview. A real employer does not turn the candidate into a financial intermediary.', fraudTradingTitle: 'Online trading, fake brokers and miracle investments', fraudTradingBody1: 'Many financial scams start with aggressive ads on social platforms, search engines or private chats. The fraudster displays a polished platform, a fake adviser and steady profits. As soon as the victim asks to withdraw, invented taxes, technical blocks or new deposit requests appear.', fraudTradingBody2: 'The concrete defense is to verify licence, registered office, independent contact details and outside reputation before sending anything. If someone pushes you to deposit immediately so you do not miss the opportunity, the urgency itself is already a warning.', fraudFakeShopTitle: 'Fake products, cloned shops and unbelievable offers', fraudFakeShopBody1: 'Clone websites sell phones, cars, appliances, tickets or luxury goods at unrealistic prices. They copy famous logos, generic terms and convincing photos, but behind the surface the goal is to collect payment without delivering anything or to ship something completely different.', fraudFakeShopBody2: 'Before buying, check the domain, company data, real address, return policy and independent reviews. If the only accepted method is a transfer to an unknown IBAN, stop the purchase. No discount is worth that risk.', fraudPhishingTitle: 'Phishing, bank spoofing and altered IBAN fraud', fraudPhishingBody1: 'Phishing does not live in email alone. It arrives by SMS, phone call, search result, fake certified message and even notes that appear to come from a bank or lawyer. The goal is always the same: make you click, reveal codes or pay to manipulated bank details.', fraudPhishingBody2: 'The strongest defense is to ignore the suspicious link and open the website manually instead. Then call the official number found on real documents and compare the IBAN with an independent source before authorising any payment.', fraudRomanceTitle: 'Romance scam, social engineering and fake emergencies', fraudRomanceBody1: 'Relationship scams build trust for weeks or months. Once the emotional bond is strong, the emergency appears: illness, travel trouble, customs problems, a shared investment, a blocked wallet or an urgent loan. At that point the victim is no longer evaluating money, but the relationship.', fraudRomanceBody2: 'A healthy response is to add an outside check every time: talk to someone who is not emotionally involved, verify photos and identity and keep one simple rule. Never transfer money to a person you have never met in a verifiable way.', fraudRecoveryTitle: 'Recovery room, fake fund recovery and double victimisation', fraudRecoveryBody1: 'After the first loss, fake investigators, improvised legal offices, crypto experts or invented associations appear and promise to recover everything in a few days. They request an advance for taxes, notarisation, unlock wallets or fictional international procedures.', fraudRecoveryBody2: 'If you have already been scammed, preserve evidence, block the contact channels and speak only with verifiable counterparts. A real recovery path does not rely on pressure in chat and does not guarantee impossible outcomes. The first defense here is not to pay a second time.', fraudCryptoTitle: 'Crypto scam, fake wallets and copied exchanges', fraudCryptoBody1: 'Crypto fraud often starts with a fake tutor, a cloned exchange, a private group or a recovery promise. The victim is pushed to move funds to a wallet they do not control or to authorise a temporary transfer that is supposed to unlock profits.', fraudCryptoBody2: 'The best defense is simple: never send coins to a wallet shared only in chat and verify the exchange URL character by character. If you cannot confirm the destination independently on a trusted device, do not move anything.', fraudSupportTitle: 'Fake technical support and remote access fraud', fraudSupportBody1: 'The fake support scam appears through popups, phone calls or messages warning about viruses, blocked banking apps or compromised devices. The attacker tries to convince the victim to install remote control software or reveal one-time codes during the so-called repair.', fraudSupportBody2: 'A real operator does not need to scare you into immediate access. Close the popup, disconnect the call and contact the official support number yourself from a trusted source. If someone asks for remote control while you are logged into banking or email, stop instantly.', fraudFakeCharityTitle: 'Fake charity and emotional donation fraud', fraudFakeCharityBody1: 'Fraudulent charity campaigns appear after wars, disasters, medical emergencies or public tragedies. They use moving images, copied logos and dramatic appeals to push donors to act quickly before checking who will really receive the money.', fraudFakeCharityBody2: 'The safest behavior is to donate only through official websites you reach independently, checking legal identity, bank details and public references. If the request insists on instant transfers to personal accounts, it is a warning, not a cause.', fraudInvoiceTitle: 'Invoice scam and payment redirection fraud', fraudInvoiceBody1: 'In an invoice scam the victim receives a bill that looks routine: same supplier name, same graphics, similar email thread. The crucial change is hidden in the payment details, where the bank account is replaced so the money reaches the attacker.', fraudInvoiceBody2: 'A strong defense is to treat every new invoice template, account change or last-minute correction as a separate verification event. Compare the banking details with older records and confirm them by phone with a trusted contact before paying.', fraudSimSwapTitle: 'SIM swap and hijacked verification codes', fraudSimSwapBody1: 'SIM swap fraud begins when criminals collect enough personal data to convince a phone operator to move your number onto another card. Once they control the line, they intercept one-time passwords and use them to enter banking, email or exchange accounts.', fraudSimSwapBody2: 'If your phone suddenly loses signal without explanation, react immediately: contact your operator from another line, block sensitive accounts and change passwords from a secure device. Activating stronger authentication than SMS reduces the damage dramatically.', fraudAccountTakeoverTitle: 'Account takeover and chained identity abuse', fraudAccountTakeoverBody1: 'Account takeover happens when attackers enter one service and then pivot into others: email, banking, shopping platforms and cloud storage. A single compromised mailbox can become the master key for password resets, card fraud and impersonation.', fraudAccountTakeoverBody2: 'The best defense is layered: unique passwords, an updated password manager, multi-factor authentication and alert review for new logins. When one account shows suspicious activity, treat every linked service as potentially exposed and rotate credentials in sequence.', fraudFakeLawyerTitle: 'Fake lawyer scam and invented legal pressure', fraudFakeLawyerBody1: 'This fraud uses legal language, stamps, copied signatures and urgent deadlines to scare the victim into paying. The message may claim to come from a law firm handling debt, copyright, inheritance, recovery or urgent settlement activity.', fraudFakeLawyerBody2: 'The correct response is to verify the lawyer independently through an official register or a number you find yourself, never through the contact details included in the threatening message. Real legal communications do not collapse when you ask for verification.', fraudParcelTitle: 'Parcel scam and fake delivery problems', fraudParcelBody1: 'Parcel scams exploit curiosity and routine. A text says your shipment is blocked, customs are unpaid or an address must be confirmed. The fee looks tiny, but the real goal is to steal card data, credentials or identity details through a fake courier page.', fraudParcelBody2: 'The practical defense is to track deliveries only from the official courier app or website that you open directly. If you were not expecting a parcel, or if the message asks for urgent payment through an unfamiliar link, treat it as suspicious from the start.', fraudMarketplaceTitle: 'Marketplace fraud and fake buyer protection links', fraudMarketplaceBody1: 'Marketplace fraud affects both sellers and buyers. A fake buyer sends a payment link outside the platform, or a fake seller requests a deposit to reserve the item. The conversation feels normal until the victim leaves the protected system and enters a cloned page.', fraudMarketplaceBody2: 'Stay inside the marketplace chat, payment flow and shipping tools whenever possible. The moment the other party tries to move the deal to an external link, courier shortcut or instant refund page, stop and re-evaluate the entire transaction.', fraudIdentityTheftTitle: 'Identity theft and document harvesting fraud', fraudIdentityTheftBody1: 'Identity theft often begins quietly: a fake form, a bogus verification request, a copied login page or an offer that asks for ID cards, selfies and utility bills. Those documents can later be reused for fraudulent accounts, loans, SIM activation or social engineering.', fraudQrCodeTitle: 'QR code scam and hidden payment redirection', fraudQrCodeBody1: 'QR code scams work because people trust visual shortcuts. A sticker can replace a real payment code at a parking meter, on a poster, in a restaurant or inside a fake invoice. One scan is enough to open a malicious page or to redirect payment to a different beneficiary.', checks. A home can be urgent, but your payment should never outrun your verification.', fraudDeepfakeVoiceTitle: 'Deepfake voice scam and cloned family
